All Saints Youth Ministry Ensures the Vital Life of the Church in the Here and Now

When All Saints Director of Youth and Young Adult Ministry Paul Bianchi first began his career in youth ministry, he would often hear people say, “Youth are the future of the Church.” Only 18 years old at the time and a young person himself, the phrase always struck Paul as being a bit misguided.

“I always thought that verbiage was a bit weird, thinking to myself, ‘Well, wait, I’m part of the Church now,’” Paul says. “And I think that’s the point where we’ve gotten to in youth ministry nowadays — it’s all about helping youth realize that they are a vital part of the Church now, providing them with opportunities to serve and be a part of parish life.”

Director of Junior High Youth Ministry and Faith Formation Chelsea Colomb adds that this newer philosophy really enables the youth of our community to feel like they belong within the parish. In turn, this makes them more willing to share their own unique gifts with the Church.

“We want our young people growing and seeing from an early age that they have gifts to share with the Church,” Chelsea says. “It helps them feel like they belong and builds an overall greater sense of community amongst our young people.”

All Saints Youth Ministry

Working to facilitate this process as much as possible, All Saints is blessed to offer parish youth a wide variety of ministry opportunities. For junior high youth, this includes a weekly Wednesday Bible Study called Ignite, occurring from 4:30 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. in the Upper Room. Always centered on the upcoming Sunday's Gospel, Ignite is designed to help youth apply the Scriptures to their own lives while also enjoying regular fellowship with their peers.

"We focus on how the Gospel is speaking to them personally, and then what it means for us collectively in our everyday lives," Chelsea says. "It's also just a time for fellowship for them."

All Saints Junior High Youth Ministry also offers Impact, a bimonthly large group gathering. Impact always takes place on a Friday evening from 7:00 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall. The meeting focuses on a designated theme and includes food, fellowship, prayer and fun.

"We'll gather for community and fun, just trying to allow them to come together outside of school," Chelsea says. "It's also a way to bring our parish and public school kids together, allowing them to form new friendships. We'll eat together, spend some time talking about the topic, pray, and then the evening wraps up."

Like the Junior High program, the High School Youth Ministry also offers a weekly Wednesday Bible Study for ninth through 12th-grade students. Teens usually begin gathering around 6:00 p.m. in the Upper Room, with the study formally taking place from 6:30 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. Also using a lectionary-based approach, the study is designed to help youth better internalize the Sunday readings so that they may participate more fully in the Mass.

"We find that focusing on the upcoming Sunday's readings really helps the young people focus a little bit more on Sunday while sitting in the pews," Paul says. "It also gives them a little bit more information historically on the backstory of what is going on — helping them understand better the message that was being relayed to the people of that time and how we can apply that to our own lives today."

Additionally, high school youth may participate in Illuminate each Sunday following the 5:00 p.m. Mass. Using the simple model of "gather, proclaim, break and send," these gatherings always include food, some form of witness or teaching, small-group discussions, and whole-group prayer.

These various Junior High and High School Youth Ministry programs are only possible, however, through the continued support of our parishioners. Whether it's joining the ministry's Core Team of adult volunteers, making financial contributions toward youth retreat scholarships, or serving "behind the scenes," there are so many ways for parents and adult parishioners to help support this ministry. This service, says Paul, goes a long way in both modeling Christianity to our youth and making them feel loved by the faith community.

"Every single person who reads this article should understand that they have a gift," Paul says. "There is always something you can share with our Youth Ministry. We have people who never want to be up front, so they work as part of the cooking team or man the sign-up table. We have people who help with audio-visual stuff, people who want to speak or come help lead prayer. One lady's gift is baking, and so she just drops off baked goods for us every week. There really is no excuse to not get involved, even if it's a one-time thing. And our teens appreciate it so much when people of the parish recognize that they are here and a part of All Saints."

One of the many blessings of youth ministry is it helps young people develop a sense of belonging here at the parish.

If you would like more information about All Saints Youth Ministry programs and how to get involved, please contact either Paul Bianchi at 972-778-0368 or Chelsea Colomb at 972-778-0330.

A Letter from Our Pastoral Administrator

Being Good Stewards of Our Personal Harvest

Dear Saints,

In the United States, October is the month that brings the completion of the harvest. Although many Americans live in urban areas and seldom ever see a farm, the foods we all eat — fruits and vegetables, meats, milk, and the grain for our bread — come from farms and ranches across America and around the world.

Some of us may feel completely detached from farm life and think that the harvest has little to do with us, but we are all connected with agriculture more closely than we realize. The success of the harvest affects the prices we pay — and if the harvest were to fail completely, there would soon be nothing available to put on our grocery shelves.

In the Old Testament world, most people were farmers, and the Israelites were to bring offerings to God from the harvest of their fields and flocks. The success of the harvest directly affected their wellbeing during the next year. At their agricultural festivals, “the measure of your own voluntary offering which you will give shall be in proportion to the blessing the Lord, your God, has given you” (Dt 16:10) they were told.

The same holds true for us. We may not have a harvest of fruits or grains, but we do receive a return for our own labor, whether it is in a factory, an office or a classroom. We are also invited by God to return a portion to Him for His glory and our own spiritual welfare, in proportion to the blessings we have received.

It’s ultimately a choice we make. Are we going to hoard everything we get, or are we going to give back to God a portion of what He gives us? When we give back to God, will we return just what’s left over after everything else is paid, or will our gifts have a higher priority? Are we, as stewards, going to return the first fruits, rather than the leftovers, to God? What choice will you make?

Yours in Christ,

All Saints Catholic School Celebrates Grand Opening of PreK3 to Eighth-Grade STEAM Innovation Lab

All Saints Catholic School (ASCS) celebrated the Grand Opening of their new Kent and Jodi Foster Innovation Lab and enhanced STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Art and Math) Curriculum. In attendance were leaders from Catholic schools, including Bishop Lynch, Christ the King, Jesuit, John Paul II and St. Joseph's, in addition to representatives from the Catholic Diocese of Dallas and members of the ASCS community.

In her opening remarks in the chapel, School Principal Shana Druffner stated, "We wanted our students to take learning outside of the classroom and into the real world... a learning environment that the kids can acquire the 21st-century skills of coding, robotics, graphic design... in a state-of-the-art facility, where they can grow, learn and experiment."

After prayer, Fr. Alfonse Nazzaro, Pastoral Administrator, blessed the new lab — then he, Kent and Jodi Foster marked the occasion with a ceremonial ribbon cutting.

Student ambassadors quickly took to the various stations of the room, demonstrating to the guests the new computer programs that were being incorporated into their lessons and showing off some of the equipment that they would be using in their course, such as merge cubes, 3D printers, and Mbots.

The lab features state-of-the-art equipment and a designated Innovation Lab director who will guide the students in all age groups. With this heightened STEAM experience for students, even the 3-year-olds will attend two classes a week with lessons focused on coding, color theory, computer skills and introductions to the design process. As the students progress, the curriculum will incorporate graphic design, project management, robotics and 3D printing. Additionally, this space promotes extracurricular STEAM learning, with clubs and family programming to make this a community-wide initiative that promotes cross-curricular learning.

Fr. Alfonse commented, "That the STEAM lab that is in the center of our school, truly brings all disciplines together. It brings in the theology and the philosophy of the human person; it brings in science and mathematics; it brings in art; it brings everything."

All Saints Catholic School serves students in PreK 3 through eighth-grade and provides a faith-filled, nurturing environment coupled with a rigorous academic program. The small-classroom setting enables teachers to work closely with students to achieve excellence in faith, academics, service and character. All Saints is a two-time recipient of the National Blue Ribbon School of Excellence Award, and graduates of All Saints are consistently ranked in the top of their high school class.

ASCS students show attendees some of the equipment that they would be using in their courses in the innovation lab.

TALKING TO KIDS ABOUT CYBERBULLYING

No matter the online platform or how much or little kids or teens engage in social media, establishing an openness to talk about what they are doing online, who they are interacting with, and what sites and apps they are using is key to setting the tone for potentially more difficult conversations. It is OK to express support for their technology use and acknowledge the value in it for them. As we all know, technology is here to stay. Set age-appropriate limits and discuss expectations. Allow them to negotiate and collaborate on an agreement. By doing this, they will be more likely to take ownership of their behavior and you will have a more solid foundation upon which to hold them accountable. Let them know that you, as their parents, reserve the right to look at their devices, if you feel there is a concern about their safety or if they demonstrate an inability to use technology safely. Connect expectations to your family values. Use language that reflects facts (something that was said or something you heard or observed), statements of consequence (certain actions are helpful or hurtful, effective or ineffective), or personal preferences (“I didn’t like seeing that”). Refrain from judgmental language (e.g., good/bad, stupid, nice, etc.). These kinds of evaluative words can heighten emotions and shut down open communication.
